"Outlaws" Aim to Equalize Playing Strength of Clubs. CHICAGO, December 17.-Federa

League representatives have gathered here for the meeting today, at which it is rumored newly signed players will be distributed with a view to equalizing the added strength. The meeting was to have been held yesterday, but a hearing in the Marsans case at St. Louis required the presence of Presi-dent Gilmore and it was postponed.

Maranville, who is now on the vaudeville stage with Edward McCue, is sait to be loath to leave Boston, where he is the idol of the base bail fans and is in close touch with the management of the team. He has a long contract here and it will have to be a most alluring proposition that will induce him to jump.

THE MUG HUNTER .- Now that the season is fairly over it may not be amiss to hurl a parting critic sm at those golfers who during the season have committed acts in their quest for mugs which are so far out of keeping with their general conduct as to be inexcusable.

The ardent mug hunter has no regard for decency or common honesty, when it comes to seeking the largest handicap he can possibly get. Likewise he forgets to live up to the little refinements which mark the difference between a gentleman and others in his relations with others using the links. Let all mug hunters rescive as they sit by the fireside surveying the season's plunder or rewards of merit as the case may be, that next season they will try to earn the lowest handicap their skill entitles them to, and study to treat all other golfers with the greatest possible degree of courtesy and consideration.

According to a report from Cleveland, Clark Griffith is trying to arrange a deai which will give the Nationals Outfielder Dode Paskert of the Phillies, Paskert lives in Cleveland and he has been bombarded with Federal League offers. The other day a wire came from Manager Moran of the Phillies telling Paskert to jump a train and come to Philadelphia for a conference, A few moments later came a wire from Griffith saying: "Don't sign with Federals. I will be able to use you."

There was no other explanation and Paskert is said to have started for the east. Paskert played under Griffith at Cincinnati. The latter has a high opinion of the outfielder and it also is known that Paskert is anxious to play under Griffith.

Inasmuch as there is danger of Paskert taking a leap to the Feds rather than return to the Phillies it is understood the Phillies are willing to consider a proposition from the Washington club for Paskert.

Manager Griffith did not put in his appearance at the club's office today, it being stated that he was out doing some Christmas shopping, so no statement from him was available.

It develops that Eddie Foster and Alva Williams, after finishing their hunting trip near Williams' home at Carthage, Ill., took a trip to California, and have since been playing winter hall out there in an independent league. winter, while the bowling and track teams are to be pitted in match games against the best opposition that can be obtained in this vicinity. The club will put forth strenuous efforts to build up strong combinations in each of the mentioned sports, besides the usual work on the water. In other words, it seems that an effort is to be made to put the Potomac Boat Club among the strongest general athletic organizations in the south.

The George Washington University basket ball team defeated the Gallaudet five last night in one of the hardest struggles that has ever taken place in the National Guard gymnasium. The Kendall Green five was leading at the end of the first haif, though its margin was not large. The Hatchetites set a much faster pace at the beginning of the second period, though, and played a whole lot better basket ball from every standpoint. George Washington went into the lead by two points near the end of the game, but two goals from the foul line evened up things for Gallaudet and the contest ended in a tle, 23 to 23, necessitating an extra five-minute period. George Washington played a rather poor article of basket ball in the first half, though it probably would not George Washington played a rather poor article of basket ball in the first half, though it probably would not have been behind had it had as much luck in shooting goals as did Gallaudet. At least half a dozen times the Hatchetites had perfect tries for the basket, but failed on each occasion. In the second half Murray was substituted for Bryant and the whole team seemed to work better thereafter. And it might be mentioned in this connection that if Murray can keep up the pace he set last night he will come pretty close to getting a regular berth.

Rockwell played the best basket ball for George Washington. His general play was exceedingly good and he was the one man of his team who appeared able to toss goals accurately. An injured ankle in the second half prevented him doing as well in that period as in the first.

Efforts to make the present invasion of the Federal League appear similar to the expansion of the American League some thirteen years ago do not go with those who are familiar with conditions in those days. When the American League made its expansion there were four idle major league cities, including Washington. Baltimore, Louisville and Cleveland were the others.

who had spent their lives in the game. Charley Comiskey was the prime mover. It was only after the advent was possible for a ball player of ability to draw enough money to make himself independently wealthy in the course of his career. ance, which cost both sides of the con-troversy a lot of money, and incident-ally reduced the standard of play.

Troversy a lot of money, and incidentally reduced the standard of play.

From a reliable source it is learned that the Federal League tried to make arrangements whereby it could transfer the Kansas City franchise to either Washington or Philadelphia. These negotiations were carried on secretly, but both falled. The impression was created some time ago that the Feds would stand pat on their circuit, but this seems to have been a blind, for Gilmore is reported to have been hustling for several weeks trying to find a city which will take over the Kansas City franchise. To begin with the Missouri town is too far away from the rest of the circuit, bsides not having shown a disposition to give the mew league club much patronage. Whether it will be possible to make any sort of an advantageous switch is doubtful for the reason that investors in that sort of a project are not easy to be found or satisfied, for if they amining the books of the new league it would be found to have been a losing venture last season.
